

A community of practice working together to take action on health equity

Who are we?

Together for Health Equity is a community of practice of people who share a common interest in tackling health inequalities and promoting health equity. The community is made up of health care practitioners, academics, community leaders, patients and carers.

What do we do?

We discuss health equity in Berkshire, Buckinghamshire and Oxfordshire to identify local community action. Our conversations combine contributions from experts as well as our own shared experiences.

Why join us?

We want to demonstrate the power of combining the expertise of professionals, patients and the public. We meet online for lively conversation, and use our webpage on Hexitime to make connections for positive change.

Connect

Connect with others to promote health equity and co-create ideas for action.

Open to all

Free to join and open to anyone interested in improving health equity.

Collaborate

Share your knowledge and earn credits for your time via the Hexitime skill exchange.

Visit our website for more info:

www.hexitime.com/together-for-health-equity

Take action

Join working groups and get involved in projects that are making a difference.

This community of practice is supported by the Oxford Academic Health Science Network, The Health Foundation and Hexitime.